I WOULD BE FREE

By Ivan Eugene Ball

(Written for School Page)

Ease up on your resisting power, Let me write in bliss for one short hour.

So of life's beauties I can write and tell,

To give the theme of this magic spell;

To pacify my burning desire

To write the rhythm of the sunset's golden fire;

To write the beauty I so commonly see

In the seasons of nature and the extent of the sea.

Of the hills that are silent and vast,

Surrounded with blue of a glorious cast;

Of the sun's caress to the forest and field,

The music of insects the forest conceals.

Unless you rove thru the hills of green

To explore the realms of nature you never have seen.

I would be free with nothing to bind

The emotions of beauty I so commonly find

In the murmuring of flowers as they gently sway

To the glimmer of the sun on a beautiful day.

The call of the dove so faintly heard

Thru the deep woods, the home of the bird.

The call of the hawk so many miles high.

A speck in the distance up near the sky.

The whisper of the wind as it fans my cheek.

The murmur of the stream as it runs to the creek.

This is the beauty my soul would express.

The glory of summer in its beautiful dress.

Oh, blind not my soul, and fingers, let them be free

To write of the sigh of the tallest tree

As it waves its limbs to winds strolling by.

But the sweet voiced wind is used to its cry.

The song of the birds, as they fly among the trees.

Where stands the dreamer who these beauties sees.

Who vainly tries to talk with tongue and pen

Of the kind work of God Who dwells within

The soul and fingers of the striving man

Who writes God's message the best he can.

STATE ROAD AID

Frankfort, Ky., March 3.—Morgan county will receive $15,469.32 annually which will be spent for improvement of county roads under supervision of the state highway department.

This money will be spent in the county under provision of the recently enacted law which provides substantial aid in county road improvement by the highway department. This action was sponsored by Governor Chandler in accord with his pledge to provide state assistance to the counties for road improvement.

The money is to be spent by the highway department "in accordance with previously agreed to and accepted plans prepared jointly by the fiscal courts of the several counties and the highway commission." It is further specified the money "shall be expended by or under the direction of the highway commission and no part of the money shall in any event be turned over to the fiscal court of any county."

The effect of this law will be to give considerable aid to the counties in improving the roads which are the responsibility of the fiscal court. Road machinery and equipment of the highway commission will be used, as will its engineering facilities, to improve the roads which the fiscal courts regard as most needful of improvement. This aid is supplemental and in no way interferes with the fiscal court's road program as now administered.

Rock Tells Weather

Prized by collectors is the "rock barometer," a beautiful piece of green stone, which turns a dirty gray when there is an increase of moisture in the air. The stone is unidentified.

PEAS TAKE A BOW

THERE'S no dodging the fact that peas play an important part in our modern diet. Therefore it is fortunate that peas are universally available in cans, the best peas harvested at their prime and clapped into cans so quickly that they lose nothing of their fresh taste and nutritious qualities.

In this form they not only save the housewife a lot of work, but they enable her to combine them with other foods in ways that would be almost impossible if she had all the work of cleaning and preparing them to do.

Here is a recipe, for instance, that would be really too much trouble, if the housewife had to prepare everything from the start, but which is practically no trouble at all when she gets her peas and salmon from cans and her macaroni from a package.

This Serves Eight

Salmon, Pea and Macaroni Casserole: Put enough macaroni to make two cups to cook in boiling salted water. Flake the contents of one tall can salmon, removing bones. Drain one cup of canned peas, grate one cup of cheese and cut four slices of bacon in halves. Make a white sauce by cooking one tablespoon minced onion in three tablespoons butter a few minutes, adding two and a half tablespoons flour, and then adding two cups milk slowly and stirring until smooth. Add two tablespoons chili sauce and season with salt and pepper. By this time the macaroni should be done. Drain it and fill the casserole in this order: half the macaroni, half the salmon, half the peas, half the white sauce. Repeat. Cover with the grated cheese and lay the bacon on top. Bake in a hot—400 degree—oven for about thirty minutes.

BOB JONES' COMMENTS

"Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the Word of God." That is a quotation from the third verse of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. You will note that it does not say that we understand the worlds were framed by the Word of God because we went into a laboratory and studied some chemicals. It says we understand this by faith. Jesus told Nicodemus, "If you do not believe me when I tell you earthly things, how will you believe me when I tell you heavenly things?" Someone has said if a man does not accept what God says about creation he will not accept what God says about salvation. The same book which says "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth" also says "by grace are ye saved through faith." All of this modernistic effort to tear out the first lines of the Bible is a satanic conspiracy to wreck the faith of men, in the authority of the only Book which offers salvation to a lost world. The religion of the Bible differs from all other religions. The religions of the world say "Do and live." The religion of the Bible says "Live and do." The reason for this difference is that all the other religions began in the wisdom of man. The religion of the Bible began in the wisdom of God.

In the old days when they had religious debates they used to argue about what the Bible said. They agreed that whatever it said was so. The most serious thing about the controversy now is that religious leaders are arguing about whether the Bible is so or not. The most important thing is not your Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Disciple, Lutheran, or Episcopal doctrines. The most important thing is this, "Is there any authority back of your doctrine?" Your doctrines are no good if they are not authoritative. You fathers and mothers need not be worried about your sons and daughters losing their denominational faith. You had better get down on your knees and pray that your children will not lose their faith in the Bible. That is the modern danger. There was a time when if a man said he was a member of a certain church everyone knew what he believed. In this day and time a man may say he is a Baptist, a Methodist, a Presbyterian, or a member of some other trinitarian denomination, and at the same time be a unitarian. An orthodox Methodist is much closer to an orthodox Baptist than an orthodox Methodist is to a modernistic Methodist. Remember, the most important thing is this, "Is the Bible the Word of God? Can you believe what it says?" The writer, who is an old time, orthodox Christian, says, "Whatever the Book says is so."

MILLARD VEST

On March 4, 1936, Rev. Millard Vest, fervent evangelist, received the call to come up higher. On March 5 funeral services were conducted in his home near Bonny by Revs. Robert McClure, Bud Graham, and Harlan Murphy. His body was then laid to rest in the Vest cemetery. Pallbearers were Harve Sheets, Clayton Henry, Glenn Lawson, A. J. Combs, Henry Patterson, Holly Pieratt, and Estill Manning. The great number of people at his funeral testify to the esteem in which he was held by all who knew him.

Mr. Vest is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lemmie Ward Vest; seven children, Alvis, Wendell, William, Vernon, Lawrence, Paul, and Gracie Lee, all at home; his father, Henry Vest; one brother, Edward; and one sister, Mrs. Grace Nickell.

About five years ago Mr. Vest accepted Jesus Christ as his personal savior. Soon thereafter he entered the ministry and since then his achievements for the Master have been marvelous. Many are the souls who have been led to Christ by the fervor of his preaching. Day after day he would toil in the field to earn a living for his family, and when night came he would go to neighboring homes and schoolhouses to tell lost souls the story of the Christ who died to save them. That meant hard work, sacrifice, keeping on when he was tired and sometimes unappreciated. But that is the path the Master chose. After all, to choose the way of Christ is to choose the way of life. Millard Vest was wise in taking this course, for he is now enjoying treasures he laid up in heaven where thieves do not break thru and steal.

So once again has death come to a dear brother, and the golden gate to the Eternal City has opened to welcome him home. He has completed his work—the ministering to the wants of the afflicted, in shedding light into darkened souls, and in bringing joy into places of misery—and his reward is the plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter into the joy of thy Lord."

Mr. Vest will be sadly missed by his family, his church, and his community, but our one consolation in giving him up is the truth expressed by Longfellow, "Dust thou art to dust thou'rt"—was not spoken of the soul.

LIGHTFOOT MAKES A SURPRISING DISCOVERY

PROBABLY there is no happier time of the year for Lightfoot the Deer than when the dreadful hunting season ends and he is once more back in his beloved Green Forest with nothing to fear. All his neighbors called on him to tell how glad they were that he had escaped again and how the Green Forest would not have been the same had he not returned.

So Lightfoot roamed about without fear and was happy. It seemed to him that he could not be happier. There was plenty to eat, and that blessed feeling of nothing to fear. What more could anyone ask? He began to grow sleek and fat and handsomer than ever. The days were growing colder and the frosty air made him feel good. Just at dusk one evening he went down to his favorite drinking place at the Laughing Brook. As he put down his head to drink he saw something which surprised him that he quite forgot that he was thirsty. What do you think it was he saw? It was a footprint in the soft mud. Yes, sir, it was a footprint.

For a long time Lightfoot stood staring at that footprint. In his great, soft eyes was a look of wonder and surprise. You see, the footprint was exactly like one of his own, only smaller. To Lightfoot it was a very wonderful footprint. He was quite sure that never had he seen such a dainty footprint. He forgot to drink. Instead, he began to search for other footprints and presently he found them. Each was as dainty as the first one. Who could have made them? That is what Lightfoot wanted to know, and what he meant to find out. It was clear to him that there was a stranger in the Green Forest, and somehow he didn't resent it in the least. In fact, he was glad. He couldn't have told why, but it was true.

Lightfoot put his nose to the footprints and sniffed of them. Even had he not known by looking at those prints that they had been made by a stranger, his nose would have told him this. A great longing to find the maker of those footprints took possession of him. He lifted his handsome head and listened for some slight sound which might show that the stranger was near. With his delicate nostrils he tested the wandering Little Night Breezes for a stray whiff of scent to tell him which way to go. But there was no sound, and the wan-

MEATS AND OTHER FOODS

AS THE main dish of the dinner is usually some form of meat, fish or fowl, something different is always a delight.

Chicken Almonds.

Cut with shears the raw meat from a three-pound roasting chicken. Cut into cubes. Soak one-half cup of dry mushrooms in one cup of water or peel and cut one cup of fresh ones. Cut a large mild onion into cubes. Fry one cup of blanched almonds in four tablespoons of peanut oil until crisp and brown, remove from the oil and keep warm. Place the chicken in the hot oil, add mushrooms and onion and one-fourth of a cup of water. Cook until the meat has lost its color, add almonds, and thicken with a tablespoon of soy sauce, one teaspoon of cornstarch and two teaspoons of water. Serve in a bowl, very hot.

Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb.

Have the shoulder blade removed from the meat, wipe with a damp cloth to remove any bits of bone. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Fry one small onion in four tablespoons of butter, add two cups of soft bread crumbs, season with salt, pepper and a tablespoon of chopped celery. Mix well and fill the pocket with the stuffing. Put the meat in a roasting pan into a very hot oven for 15 minutes. Reduce the heat to a moderate oven, add one cup of boiling water and bake 15 minutes to the pound, basting every half hour, adding more water when necessary. Peas are especially good to serve with lamb.

TRAVELING PAPER BALL

THE magician shows two wads of paper, one in each hand. He asks a spectator to hold one paper ball; the magician places it within the person's fist.

Then the magician pockets the second ball of paper. A mysterious snap of his fingers causes that ball to join the one which the spectator is holding—so the magician says, and his statement proves correct. Upon opening his hand, the spectator finds both paper balls.

Three balls of paper are used in the trick. In one hand, the magician holds two pressed together so they look like one. This is the "ball" which he places in the spectator's fist. Naturally, when he opens his hand, the spectator finds two instead of one.

The Work That Must Be Done

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THEY do the work that must be done:

The world has little need of lines Like these—men first must feel the pines.

And build a shelter from the sun. They do the work ordained of old: The world has little need of laws Till they, who seldom seek applause, Shall feed the hungry, clothe the cold.

They do the work God had in mind: The world has little need of more, Though this is all they labor for, The care and comfort of mankind. They do the work that God began: The world has little need of speech, For they, with service, better teach Mankind the brotherhood of man.

They do the work, the humble deeds: The world has little need of art Until the workers do their part, For out of them all art proceeds. They do the work by God begun: The world has not a greater need Than hands that house and clothe and feed—

They do the work that must be done.

Lesson for March 8 JESUS AND THE LAWYER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:25-27. GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself.—Luke 10:27. PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Good Neighbor. JUNIOR TOPIC—Who Is My Neighbor? INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Be a Good Neighbor. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Whose Neighbor Am I?

The subject, "Jesus Teaches Neighborliness," chosen by the lesson committee, deals only with one side of the question; namely, man's duty to his fellow men; whereas, his first duty is to God.

I. How to Inherit Eternal Life (vv. 25-28).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 25). The term "lawyer" here means "one versed in religious law, the Scriptures," not "lawyer" in our modern sense of that term. It more nearly corresponds to our theological professor. The lawyer's object was to trip Jesus, to induce him to take such a stand as would weaken his influence as a teacher.

2. Jesus' question (v. 26). "What is written in the law?" He sent him to the law, the field which was familiar to him. Jesus thus robbed him of his own weapon. Though Jesus knew the motive of the lawyer, he did not evade his question.

3. The lawyer's reply (v. 27). He made an intelligent answer, declaring that the entire content of the law was embraced in love to God and man.

4. Jesus' reply (v. 28). The straightforward answer went to the heart of the lawyer. Perfect love to God and man is truly the way of life. No man has yet had or can have such love. His sinful condition precludes its possibility. The lawyer keenly felt this thrust. He was defeated on his own grounds and, therefore, convicted of guilt.

II. "Who Is My Neighbor?" (vv. 29-37).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 29). "Who is my neighbor?" This question reveals the insincerity of the lawyer. Christ's answer had reached his conscience and now he seeks to escape the difficulty by asking a capacious question.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 30-37). Jesus' reply more than answered the lawyer's question. In the parable of the Good Samaritan he makes clear who is a neighbor, and also what it means to be a neighbor and what loving a neighbor means. Christ's answer had a double meaning. He not only made clear "Who is my neighbor," but also that the lawyer was not playing the neighbor.

a. This destitute and wounded man, left on the wayside by the robbers, is a man who needs a neighbor. My neighbor, therefore, is the one who needs my help, whether he lives next door, or on the other side of the world. Love does not regard locality, nationality, or blood relation. Those who have the spirit of Christ can see their neighbors on every hand.

b. What being a neighbor means. Our supreme consideration should not be, "Who is my neighbor?" but "Whose neighbor am I?" To be a neighbor is

(1). To be on the lookout for those in need of help (v. 33). Love is always on a journey. It is keen to discern the needs of those with whom it is brought into contact.

(2). To have compassion on the needy (v. 33). Christ's compassion was aroused as he came into contact with those who were suffering and in need. Those who are Christlike will be likewise moved.

(3). To give to those in need (v. 34). Love does not calculate the cost of its actions. Whenever there is the calculation of cost there is the expression of selfishness. Many are willing to give money to help the poor and needy, but are unwilling personally to minister to them. Many times the personal touch is more important than the material aid.

(4). To bind up wounds. If we have eyes to discern we shall see many wounds about us that need attention.

(5). To set the helpless ones on our beasts while we walk (v. 34). This is the proof of the genuineness of our love. Those who are like Christ will deny themselves in order to have something to give to those in need.

(6). To bring to the inn and take care of the unfortunate (v. 34). Genuine love does not leave its service incomplete. Much Christian service is partial, leaving the man to take care of himself.

(7). To give money (v. 35). It costs a good deal to be a neighbor. Love is the most expensive thing in the world. It cost God his only Son; it cost Jesus Christ his life.

Goodness

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy if I may.

Almanac That Saved Life of Columbus Is Exhibited

A book that, according to legend, saved the life of Christopher Columbus has been on view in an exhibition of the library of the late former king of Portugal in Paris, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The exhibition includes 120 items published between 1480 and 1500 by the most important printers of Europe.

Columbus had the Perpetual Almanac of Abraham Zacuto with him on his journey to America. Legend says that at one time the Indians were on the point of killing him. He impressed them by predicting an eclipse of the sun of which he had read in the almanac. They thereupon desisted.

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

CONSTIPATED 30 YEARS

"For thirty years I had chronic constipation. Sometimes I did not go for four or five days. I also had awful gas bloating, headache and pain in the back. Adierka helped right away. Now I eat sausage, bananas, pie, anything I want and I sleep soundly all night and enjoy life."—Mrs. Mabel Schott.

If you are suffering from constipation, sleeplessness, sour stomach, and gas bloating, there is quick relief for you in Adierka. Many report action in 30 minutes after taking just one dose. Adierka gives complete action, cleaning your bowel tract where ordinary laxatives do not even reach.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adierka checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and colon bacilli." Give your stomach and bowels a real cleansing with Adierka and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY?

DR. JAMES W. BARTON
Talks About

Underweight Children
IN THESE days when parents are trying to reduce weight, the fact that their youngster is a little underweight may not disturb them very much.

However just as overweight is a liability in adults past forty, so is underweight a liability or menace to health in children.

Sometimes parents who were quite thin as youngsters and are now much overweight think nothing of their youngster being underweight as they think it is a natural or inherited condition. Now there is no question but that children usually resemble their parents—it couldn't be otherwise—but that children must be thin or underweight and remain underweight because the parent they resemble was very thin, is not necessarily true. Dr. James S. McEster, Birmingham, Ala., the noted nutrition expert and this year president of the American Medical association, says, "Improvement of the stock as a result of the betterment of the diet has been observed repeatedly in the lower animals and in men. Chinese living under improved nutritive conditions in Hawaii grow taller than people of the same type or strain in China and their growth continues to a greater age than does the growth of those remaining in China. Thus the average height at twenty years of age was one full inch more than that of similar groups in the province of Kwangtung from which they had come to Hawaii."

Physique Varies With Habitat.
Similarly children born of Japanese living in California show definite superiority in height, weight and other characteristics over their parents who had come to California from Japan.

Also children born in the large cities of America are taller and have a better physique than their parents who came from Europe.

It is common observation in medical schools that the Jewish students of European parentage who apply for admission are strikingly superior in physical make-up to their parents.

Better food and better living habits can improve the children of natives in any country anywhere.

However, being taller—an inch or more in height—does not always mean being stronger or more able to withstand hardships or ailments, nevertheless it is only too true that there is abundant evidence that greater strength and a better physique accompany this increase in height. This was shown recently when of 100 English school children, selected to compete in athletic events, 87 per cent of the winners were above the normal for height and weight and only 6 per cent below normal, and the winners showed a proportion of overweight three times that of the seconds, thirds, and also-rans.

Milk Increases Stature.
From Japan a public health bulletin stated that when groups of Tokyo school children were given milk in addition to their regular diet, not only was there a greater increase in weight and height, but these children were more cheerful and happy and showed greater powers in athletics than did those who were not given this extra supply of milk.

Now the best building foods for children are meat, eggs, and milk, but meat and eggs are expensive and not available to some families. However good energy giving and fattening foods can be used generously such as butter, bacon, cereals, bread, sugar with meat or eggs once a day at least and twice if possible.

In addition to this, foods rich in minerals should be eaten daily—cheese, leafy vegetables, fruits, nuts. Also foods rich in vitamins—green vegetables—spinach, lettuce, string beans, beet tops, yellow vegetables—carrots, squash, sweet potato; root vegetables, tomatoes, oranges, bananas, grapefruit, cabbage, liver.

Besides good food, rest is of vital importance in building up undernourished children. Rest or sleep means that all the body processes are working a little more slowly than when the youngster is up and playing, thus not using up the tissues so quickly.

"In the future those races who will take advantage of newer knowledge of foods and their values, will attain a larger stature, greater vigor, increased length of life, and a higher level of living."

Coronary Thrombosis
DR. WARREN B. COCKSEY of Detroit has a treatment for coronary thrombosis which consists of having the patient remain absolutely at rest in bed for at least six weeks after the attack. After this another six weeks elapse before any activity is permitted, and careful supervision of the patient's activities is continued for a whole year.

Doctor Cocksey makes a sensible explanation to the patient of what has happened to his heart, showing the length of time needed to re-establish the circulation and for healing, and thus the great necessity for the patient to rest and so give the heart the least amount of work possible.

College Course Stresses Health

The total cost of sickness a person is estimated to be $22 a year, or close to $95 for the average family. Health is less expensive than sickness, and much illness is preventable, or may be cured with good nursing, right diet, and careful carrying out of the physician's instructions. This is the reason a laymen's course on "Health of the Family" has been introduced into the home economics curriculum of the university of Kentucky college of agriculture, and is required for graduation.

Instruction is given in the relation of nutrition to building health over a period of years; home nursing of the sick and care of the sickroom; detection of symptoms of disease, especially in children; emergency treatment in cases of food poisoning, drowning, etc., and elimination of factors that make for illness. Illustrative materials used in nurses' training are obtained from local hospitals and used in the course.

Illness has a double cost, that of the doctor's bill and possible hospital care, and the loss of time from work. There are also the drain upon energy, discouragement from repeated illnesses, and trouble to the family as a whole. For these reasons, public health is a major consideration. In many cases, physical handicaps can be removed, milk and water kept pure, and spread of disease stopped. As the larger part of home economics graduates marry and establish homes, it is especially desirable that they be given intensive training in the factors making for health.

Both the contestants and the audience were eager to know who were the winners.

YOUR GOVERNMENT

No. 1
A Federal System of Government

Ordinarily governmental powers are distributed in two ways—territorially and functionally. Functional distribution means that powers are divided among the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of government. In case there is a recognized division of power between these three branches, the resulting government is presidential. On the other hand if all the power rests with the legislative branch of government, the resulting form of government is called parliamentary. These two types may be illustrated by the system of government which prevails in Great Britain and in the United States, the United States is a presidential type, while Great Britain operates under a parliamentary type.

Territorial governmental powers may be divided between a single government and various local units or all powers may be concentrated in the single government which in turn determines the powers of the local units. If powers are divided between two, the resulting form is called federal, while if powers are concentrated in the single government, the resulting government is a unitary system. In the United States we operate under a federal system and powers are divided between the national government and the states according to the formula as set forth in the tenth amendment of the constitution of the United States. According to this amendment the national government exercises only delegated powers while the state government exercises reserved powers. This is another way of saying that the national government can perform only those functions delegated to it while the states may exercise any powers not prohibited. In determining the constitutionality of any federal law the question to be raised is, "Does the constitution delegate this power to congress?" while the question to be raised in testing the validity of a state law is, "Does the constitution prohibit or prevent states from exercising this power?"

Theoretically, the state in our federal system is the reservoir of power, but it is interesting to observe that the decisions of the supreme court over a long period of time have had the effect of strengthening the powers of the national government and in turn weakening the activities of the states. It is reasonable to expect that this tendency will continue, although we may never reach the point of substituting a unitary system for a federal system. The federal system of government is an American invention. The United States was the first world power to experiment with this system. Suffice it to say that our experiment has been reasonably successful and in spite of the fact that practically all new governments in the last century have elected to follow the unitary plan, the United States will more than likely continue to operate under our federal system.

Preserved Spirits

The South Sea Solomon Islanders endeavor to keep the souls of the dead with them, in their own parlors. When a death occurs they angle for the ghost of the late-departed with a sort of little fishing rod, and when they catch it put the soul or ghost in a case, along with some bodily relic, in a corner of the room.

The Flea Market

In addition to its bird market, horse market, diamond market and dog market, Paris has several flea markets. These were so named because their main sales were originally old clothes and rugs, but today they are jumble sales. A tour of the markets is still considered one of the tourist thrills in Paris.

Robert Waring —Glen Lacy

This will be the second play given by the club this year. Everyone who saw "The Man from Nowhere" will expect another successful production.

The debating club and its sponsor, Miss McClure, entertained with a leap year party Saturday, Feb. 28.

The girls found it quite a novelty to ask a young man for a date, pay his admission, and take him home after the party. The main events were two contests, the best proposal by a girl and the neatest apron hemmed by a boy. Games and fortune telling completed the entertainment. Proceeds of the party totalled $16.

P.T.A.

The Cannel City Parent-Teachers association held its regular meeting Monday night, March 2. The president, Mrs. G. W. Leslie, called the meeting to order and the devotional was given by Arthur Briscoe. In the business meeting that followed, Miss Spenser, treasurer, gave the following report: tuckey party, $14.88; pie supper, $26.50; donated by debating club, $10; net total, $42.90. Mrs. M. R. Elam, membership chairman, reported six new members, and Mrs. D. C. Burton, chairman of the program committee, announced that a definite date would be set for the wedding of Jeanie June and Tom Thum as soon as the dressmakers and tailors announced that the trousseau was completed.

A play, "Where's Grandma?", will be given in the latter part of the month. Plans for a junior-senior banquet were discussed and a committee was appointed to investigate for the purpose of finding out whether the juniors and seniors and the people of the community were in favor of the plan.

Since this was the last meeting of the P.T.A. before the close of the grade school, each teacher in that department was responsible for a number on the program. Miss Lacy gave a demonstration lesson in singing, in which she taught a group of first graders a new song in only a few minutes. Hollie Mae Donovan, from Miss Spenser's room, told in an interesting way a story, "The Fisherman and His Wife." Talmage Lacy and Carl Lacy entertained with guitar music. Mrs. Burton discussed the importance of the P.T.A. and the help it had been to the school this year. In the last part of her talk, she made a plea for outside reading for each pupil. She suggested that this could, in part, make up for the short term of the grades.

The pictures for attendance again went to Mr. Lacy and Miss Leslie. The fourth and seventh and eighth grades are proud of this record of attendance on the part of their parents.

Basketball

The Raiders, Cannel City's basketball team, were again crowned champions of the 57th district for the second straight time last Saturday night when they emerged victorious over the best crop of teams this territory has ever produced. This year the team was compelled to beat three of the best teams in the district, West Liberty, Frenchburg, and Salyersville. The Raiders, dressed in new suits and keyed to a high pitch, played their smoothest game to beat West Liberty 27 to 14. There was no individual star as the five men, and even the substitutes, clicked as a unit.

In the Saturday afternoon game against Frenchburg, the team was just a little tense and was "off" in teamwork, but hard, clean fight from tip off to final gun pulled them thru and after trading at the half 10 to 8, they won out by cooler play in the last half by 22 to 19. This proved to be the best game in the whole tournament, as Frenchburg and Cannel City, keen, friendly rivals who had broken even during the season and finalists in the meet last year, fought at a fast clip as it was to be seen that the winner of this game would be the ultimate champion. A faster game has never been played in this district. The house was in an uproar as ballam rolled and it was hard to hear the whistle at all times. When Walton faded out in the third quarter it looked rough for the Raiders, but Zornes, the substitute, came thru in the style and the team still clicked. The result of the final game was never in doubt after the first two minutes of play when the Raiders scored 5 points. They were content to keep it hot by never passing and ball handling and let the other team do the fretting.

At the end of the game trophies were presented by Mr. Stephens to the winner, Cannel City, the runner-up, Salyersville, for sportsmanship, Crockett, and individual trophies as valuable men to Fairview at Frenchburg, Haney of Cannel City, and Adams of Salyersville.

The team goes to Prestonsburg on Thursday to play in the regional meet. Their first opponent will be Cumberland high school of Elk Horn City in Pike county. Salyersville will play Paintsville on Friday night.

The school, team, and coach wish to thank members of the P.T.A. for the nice warm-up suits donated them, and promise to try to merit these things even more than by winning ball games.

The team also wishes to thank the many fans from the community who went to Frenchburg to cheer them on. The community, the school, the team, and the coach wish to express their appreciation for support given them by people from other parts of the county, as there was a large crowd from West Liberty pulling for us after their own team lost.

The team taken by Coach Burton to Frenchburg was composed of Lacy and Walters, forwards, Haney, center, Walton and Patrick, guards. The substitutes, some of whom played important parts, were Zornes, Haney, Dunnigan, and Sebastian.

Very fine sportsmanship was shown by all teams in the tournament, and the affair was well managed by the Frenchburg school. We wish to thank them for the fine treatment afforded us.

CHAPTER I

The house stood alone on a sand-dune overlooking the sea—dark, deserted, and silent, except for the swish of the rain blowing against its shingles.
Wet to the skin, and shivering, the Duke struggled to pry open a window.

From his dank coat pocket, the Duke drew a cheap jackknife and a tiny searchlight. With these in his hands, he turned to look toward the highway.
It was invisible, two hundred yards from the porch on which he stood, winding over and around about these dunes.

The Duke's thumb pressed the button, and, momentarily, the ray revealed waving wet beach-grass, and a single scrub pine bent in the wind. Then, carefully, he began cutting away the dry putty that held a pane of glass.

It was slow work. "Why don't I break the damned thing?" the Duke asked himself, and, a minute later, felt the unshattered glass drop into his hand.

It was easy to open the window, then, and, easy for a slim and agile man to climb through. Once inside the house, he paused. Would the electric lights be working, and would it be safe to turn them on? Why not? Half the summer residences in Southampton had been opened for the season. Even an observant passer-by—if there were to be one—would think a brightly lighted room less remarkable than a furtive ray. The Duke touched a switch his searchlight had disclosed beside a door.

It was exactly the sort of room he had expected—a luxurious summer residence in a luxurious summer residence.
Most of the furniture was covered, but a gay breakfast table stood in the center, and, beyond it, was an open door to a pantry. The Duke walked through, and into the kitchen, turning on lights as he went.

"Guess they're going to open the house pretty soon. After all, why should they mind an extra weekend guest?"

He grinned, and anyone who had seen that grin might have found it hard to mind. It was an ingratiating grin, in a pleasant, likeable face. A lean face, weather-beaten and a little boney, but with large, kind, steel-gray eyes, surmounted by a tuft of unruly brick-red hair. The Duke's trim figure stretched a tidy six feet above the worn soles of his untidy boots, but his gray suit, though worn, too, and wet, was well cut and well made, revealing square shoulders and firm muscles.

"Wonder if there's any grub," said the Duke.

All the kitchen shelves bore bright-colored tin boxes, with bright lettering, but they were empty. The bread-box was empty, of course; no use opening that. But above the shelves was a cupboard, and in that cupboard were rows of canned things—each can neatly wrapped in paper—sardines, anchovies, caviar, chicken, ham, tongue —all sorts of things. "Hospitalable people," said the Duke. "I wonder where they keep the coffee."

Thirty minutes later, His Grace had dined sustenance, if not well. Half the contents of the pot of coffee still bubbling on the stove had warmed him comfortably, and he washed the dishes.
Then he put everything back in place, turned on the lights, and, whistling merrily, went upstairs.

At the top of the steps was a kind of library—book-lined, with doors on either side, and, at its end, windows facing the sea. Even through the blackness, the intruder could discern the almost luminous white of breaking waves.

Again, he touched a switch, and, this time, lights sprang into being in shaded table-lamps, doubly shaded now by winter wrappings. A fire had been laid in the grate. He lit the fire, and a cigar, and then opened a door on his right.

This was a man's room, gracious and inviting. The Duke felt the mattress drawn back over the footboard of the bed, and, sniffing a pungent odor of cedar and camphor, turned his attention to a closet across the room. A very large closet, with an electric light in it, and built-in drawers, and a cedar chest. Atop the chest were two pairs of slippers, and above it hung the only garment visible, a blue-striped dressing gown of soft, light flannel. His own apparel still clinging damply, the Duke took the dressing gown and slippers back to the blazing fire, and, standing luxuriously before it, changed his clothes.

Still neat, he carried the gray suit and the wet undergarments back to the bedroom, folded the trousers carefully, and laid them on the box-spring. With one hand, he flung the mattress into place over them.

He returned to the fire, stretching himself lazily in a huge, over-stuffed chair. Outside, the storm was growing steadily worse. Wind-fung against the windows, the rain kept up its incessant swish. A little puddle formed on one of the sills. The Duke mopped it up with an old cloth that had been spread over the big chair, and looked through the glass into a cluster of bushes, illuminated from the windows, that tossed their tops frantically, as though moved by wild despair. "It's a filthy night," the man in the dressing gown thought, as he sauntered back to the crackling logs, drawing contentedly at his cigar, and pausing to take a look from the loaded shelves. "A filthy night."

In the thick of it he had been an hour before. Penniless, overcast, trudging along the cement-paved road from Bridgehampton, five miles to the east. Was it five miles, he thought, or fifteen, or fifty? On foot, he had left New York that morning just after daybreak. Jobless and flat broke.

For a month—all through April, in fact—the Duke had tramped the streets looking for "a regular job." "What the hell makes me want to keep straight?" he had asked himself, again and again. "That's all right for guys with an income. If somebody'd started me in a rubber-tired tram, and wheeled me into college, and out again into papa's office—sure, I'd run straight.
Why not? Who couldn't be a knight in armor? But being a knight without armor—that's different. When you get dumped into a fight, naked, with nothing but your bare fists, and the whole world coming at you with brick-bats and brass knuckles, what a d—d fool you are to stick to the Marquis of Queensbury Rules!"

Still, he had stuck—reasonably, at least—in the face of what seemed almost a conspiracy of discouragement.
Fired out of Hollywood for a theft of which he was innocent as an unborn babe. "All right," he had said; "I've got a few hundreds saved, and I'll go East, and start all over again." Con-siderately, he had left the railway station in Chicago, only to have his pocket picked before he had got as far as the hotel. He had nearly frozen in Chicago. He had nearly starved. And then he had hitch-hiked to New York, riding freights when he could. A pal had christened him "the Duke," because of his clothes, and his English, and the grand manner he had acquired in Filmdom.

New York—with those Hollywood shoes wearing thin, and that Hollywood gray suit, that had cost $125, getting frayed and baggy. Part of a jobless army in a city without jobs. He had eaten his overcoat—or the proceeds from it, at any rate—and paid the last time for a bunk in a flophouse.

A love of books, a sense of humor, and the wanderlust—these he had inherited from an Irish father, whose name was Francis X. Gilbert, and whose proudest boast was that he came from the University of Dublin.
He had died in China, nearly six years ago, leaving the seventeen-year-old boy, Barry, to fight his way from Hong Kong to Hollywood, and from Chicago to New York. And so Barry had crossed the Queensboro Bridge to Long Island, and picked up a truck, and charmed the driver into buying him a pretty good lunch at Huntington. Bay Shore in a passing car, and Sayville on foot, and another truck to Bridgehampton, where he had lost his bearings and tramped back miles before he found himself again on the edge of Southampton.

It was black night, and beginning to rain. A cold wind had sprung up from the northeast. An endless, winding road, and wind-and-rain-swept dunes, with solitary houses. Grand houses they were, all of them. A few had lights inside—and dogs wandering about, as he had discovered in the course of two desperate excursions.

Most of these dwellings were dark and vacant. "Houses without people," the Duke had muttered, still not too-resentfully, "and people without houses. It doesn't seem fair."

His teeth were chattering by now, and his feet squished in his wet shoes.
And this house had seemed so utterly deserted, so entirely safe and secure.
"Ten o'clock," said the Duke. "What's the chance of anyone finding me in there tonight? And, if they do, it's better than freezing to death. I'll be on my way again at daybreak."

Now, fed and warm, he was growing drowsy before the fire. "It must be swell to live like this all the time," he brooded, dreamily. "I wouldn't break into anybody's house if I had one like this. Gosh, I guess I'll sleep here. It's warmer than the bed, and I've got a long hike ahead of me in the morning."

His head fell forward and secure, he was closing, when he heard an automobile door slam, and, an instant later, the voices and the shuffling of feet on the porch directly beneath him.

The Duke sprang to the electric switch.

Fast he moved, his wits worked faster still.

"No," he thought; "that won't do.
If the lights go out, they'll know there's something wrong!"

The breakfast room window—that was it! But not in dressing gown and slippers. "Damned fool, to take my clothes off!" thought the Duke.
Who were these people, anyway, driving up to a closed house at this hour?
Thieves? Stragglers, like himself?
Hardly—in a big limousine like that he glimpsed hastily from the window.

Well, what next? Jail, probably.
How long could they give a man for unlawful entry? "Damn!" said the Duke. And then he heard the lower door open, and a woman's voice in the hail. "Maybe I can talk my way out," he thought, and started down the stairs. "Who's there?" he called, bravely, as his feet touched the first landing.

"Willets," he said. "Willets, the butler. Is that you, Mr. Ridder?"
And the lights went on.

Standing there, on the landing naked except for the dressing gown, the Duke found himself facing a party of four. Willets, with his hat in his hand, squat and powerfully built and indifferently bald, and two women—one quite young, and the other middle-aged and stout. They seemed propi-etary, and the fact gave him instant courage.

"Is that you, Mr. Ridder?" The question had been asked first in the dark, but now it was repeated in a glare that made every face plainly visible. The butler didn't know Mr. Ridder, then. That was "a lucky break." It would give him time to dress, and get away.

"Yes," he answered, quietly. "You're a little late, aren't you?"

"Sorry, sir," said the butler. "I didn't have any idea you'd be here.
Your mother said you wasn't coming until tomorrow. Evans had to take 'em down to the ship—and her and your father, sir—and then he had to go back to the hotel, and pick up me, and cook, and the maid. The storm didn't help, neither, and we stopped at Patchogue for dinner. I hope you ain't going to be put out, sir."

Fire Damages Are Greater Than Flood Losses in U. S.

As a generalization, greater loss is caused by fire than by flood in this country. In 1933, fire losses amounted to $16,897,733; fire losses amounted to $275,652,060; floods, $5,600,000.

While fire losses are constantly high from year to year, the losses by flood vary greatly, being high only in certain years, when disastrous floods occur.

Monograms Make Your Linens Doubly Precious

Variety's the Spice of Life—and monograms, too, for the smartest ones today combine letters in varying sizes. That's why we included four different alphabets—a large, a medium and two small ones—so that you may "scramble" your own. They work up easily and quickly, using a combination of satin, seed and buttonhole stitches with a bit of cut-work. Anyone with "Hope Chest" can find these alphabets invaluable. They fit beautifully into a diamond or triangular shape.

Pattern 1126 comes to you with a transfer pattern of an alphabet 3 inches high; one 2 inches high; and two alphabets 1½ inches high; information for placing initials and monograms; illustrations of all stitches needed.

Barrels Hid Noted Papers; Queen's Tears Damp Stains

When Grant Duff visited the Register house at Edinburgh in 1862 he was shown a number of valuable and important state documents, including the list made by Mary Queen of Scots of her jewels and was told that this with many other valuable papers, had been taken to London in the time of Cromwell "and not sent back to Edinburgh till recent times. These valuable papers were packed in hogsheads and suffered much from the damp."

Joseph Robertson, the greatest of Scottish antiquaries of the period, had a good story about Mary's list of jewels which was one of the documents that suffered from the damp.
He declared that Miss Strickland mistook the damp stains for the queen's tears and wrote a pathetic little passage accordingly.—Manchester Guardian.

OF COURSE, you know that children should never drink coffee. But do you realize that the caffeine in coffee disagrees with many grown-ups, too?
